Valediction

...is often the lost forgotten secret to impressing your readers. When it's time to bid farewell to the reader, rather than simply saying until next time or Goodbye add some flare and personality to your exiting email.

The trick to a slick valediction is to add your own twist to them based on the theme of your email.

If you're sending Jokes to your readers and it includes a Joke about a smelly bum; include the Valediction: Smell Ya Later

When you head out to your exclusive Hawaiian Vacation start your email with an Aloha and don't forget to say goodbye with Aloha too!

The extra personality when it's called for will hold well with your readers. You may even get a reply back that includes the 'new' phrase you introduced them to.

Ending Note: Have fun with them, mix and match and be sure to makeup and log your own creations.

val·e·dic·tion (val-lid-dik-shun) Noun

1. An act of bidding farewell; a leave-taking.
2. A speech or statement made as a farewell.
3. A word or phrase of farewell used to end a letter or message.

Valediction: <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Valediction>

"A valediction ("to say farewell") is an expression used to say farewell, especially at the end of a letter, or the act of saying parting words- whether brief, or extensive."

The Short List

This is truly a short list of the thousands if not millions of possible Valedictions you can use. Be creative and don't forget to include your native languages and slang into the mix.
